LE COLISÉE

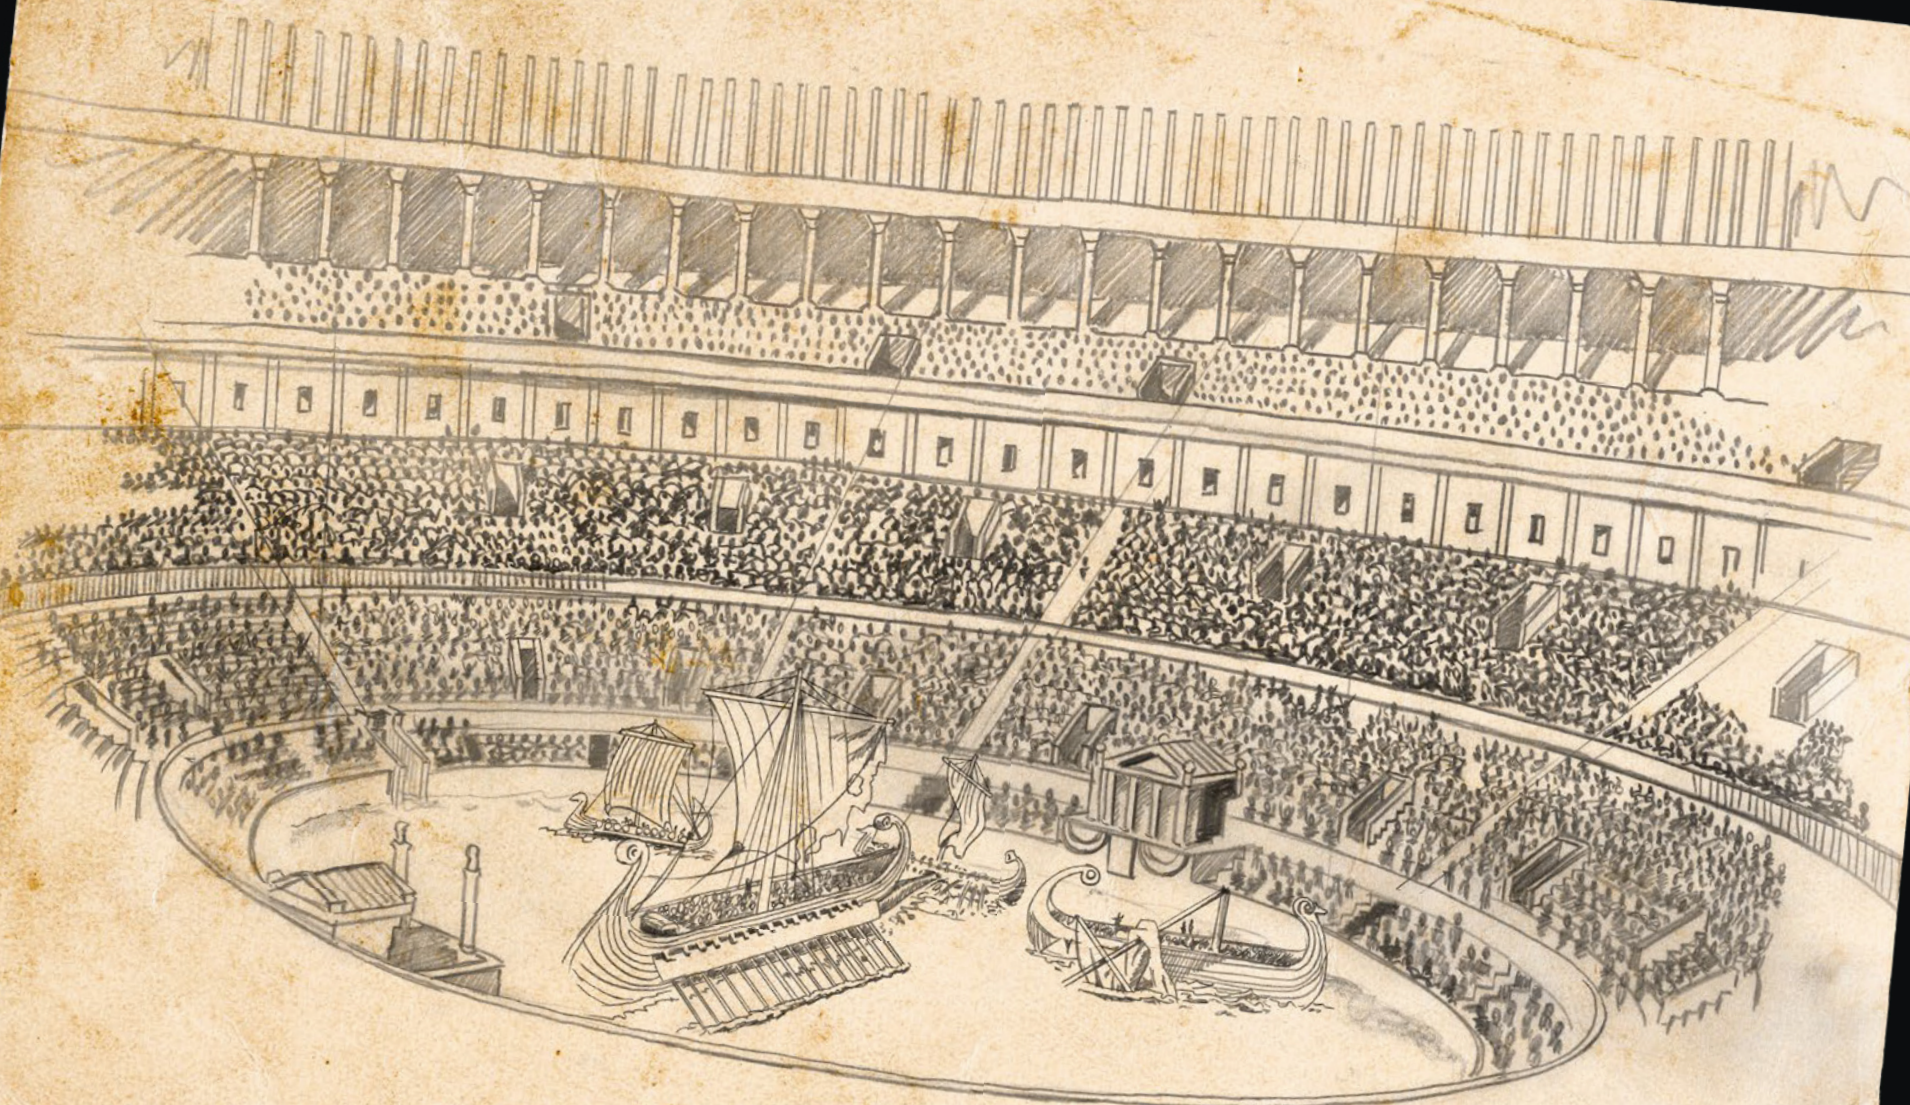

II

HISTOIRE

En 64 apr. J.-C., le grand incendie de Rome dévaste la ville, et l'empereur Néron s'empare d'une grande partie de la zone où le Colisée se trouve aujourd'hui. La construction démarre sous l'empereur Vespasien en 72 apr. J.-C. et s'achève sous son successeur et héritier, Titus, en 80 apr. J.-C. D'autres modifications, dont la construction de l'hypogée sous l'arène, sont effectuées durant le règne de Domitien, le 3^e empereur de la dynastie flavienne.

Les foules affluent pour voir les reconstitutions dramatiques de batailles maritimes historiques.

LE SPECTACLE

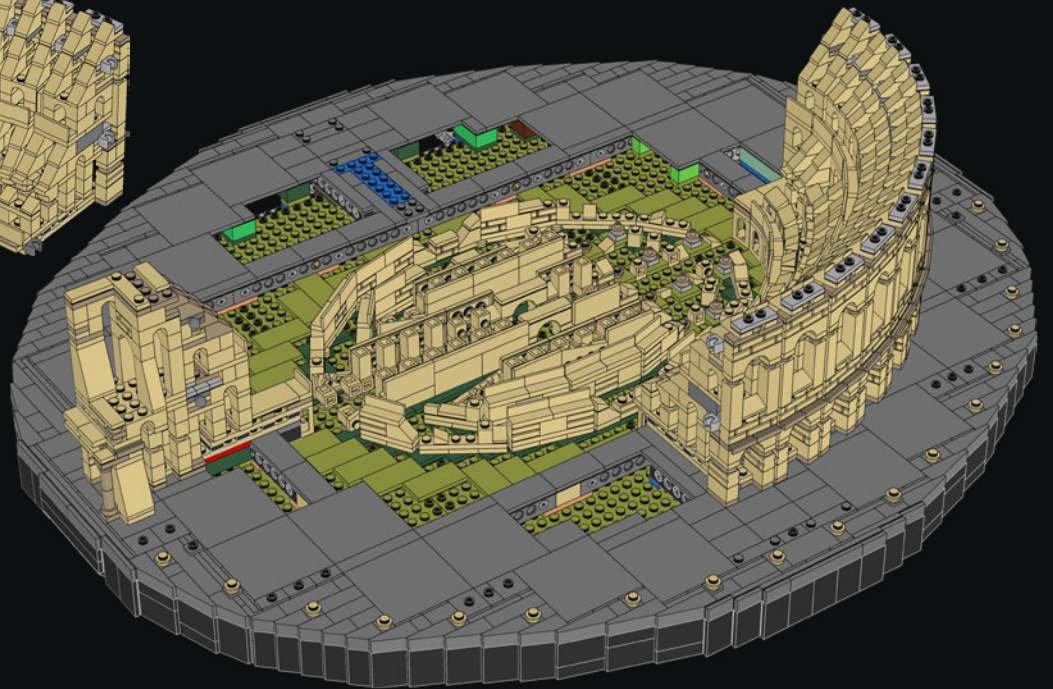

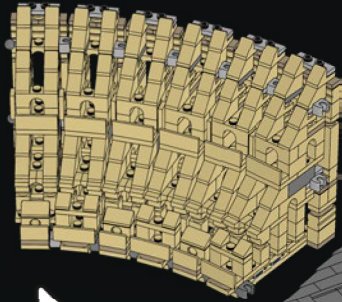

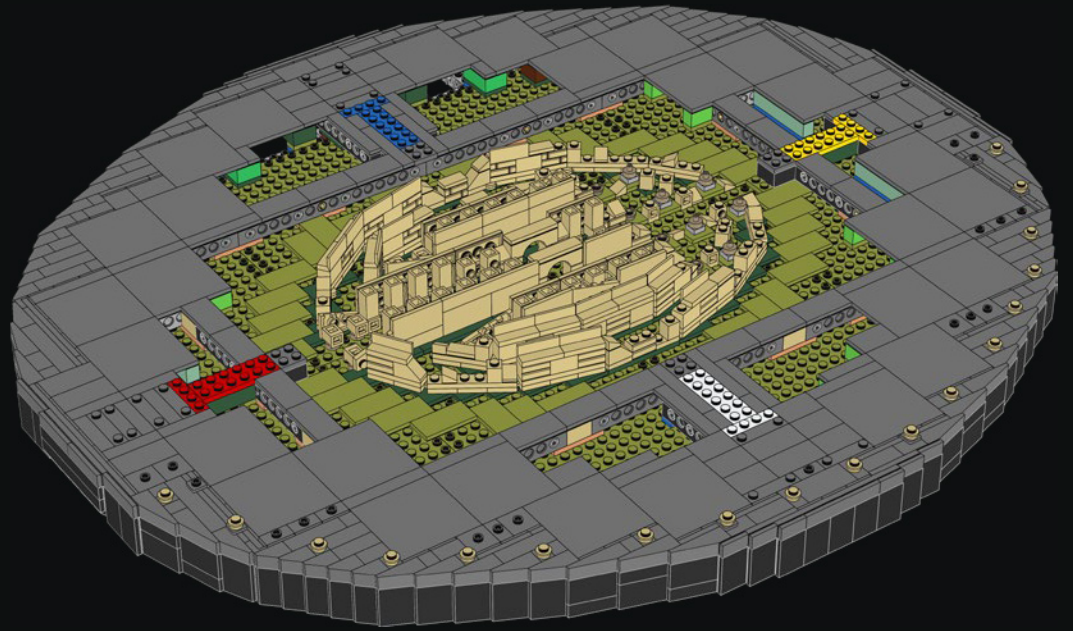

Les reconstitutions de batailles navales épiques figuraient parmi les événements les plus populaires au Colisée. La première a eu lieu en 80 apr. J.-C. L'arène avait été remplie d'eau pour permettre à des navires à fond plat, construits spécialement pour l'occasion, de reproduire la bataille entre Athènes et Syracuse. On ignore comment l'arène pouvait être remplie d'eau puis vidée aussi rapidement, mais de nombreux écrivains antiques décrivent ces spectacles impressionnants du nom de naumachies.

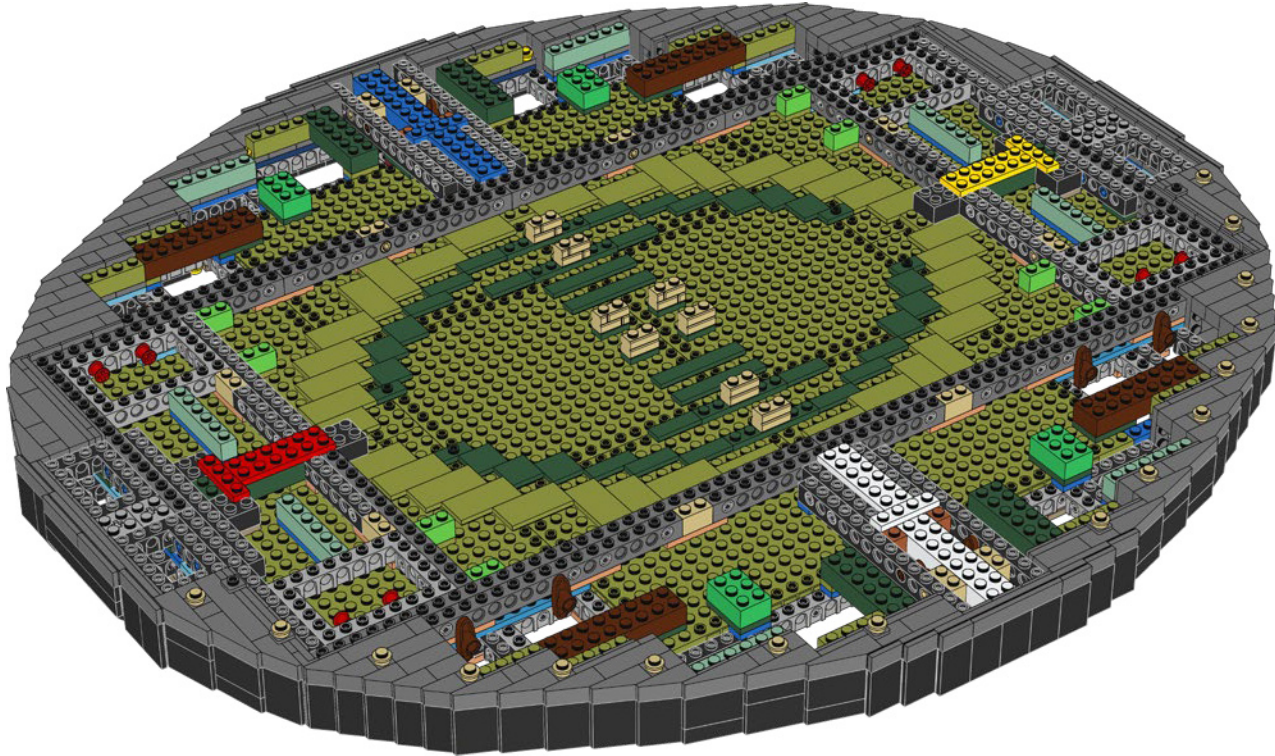

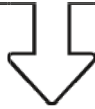

Chaque niveau était divisé en sections et subdivisé en cunei, ou coins, par les marches et les allées des vomitoria. Chaque rangée (gradus) de sièges était numérotée, permettant à chaque siège individuel d'être désigné exactement par son gradus, son cuneus et son numéro.

LES SPECTATEURS

La foule constituée d'environ 80 000 personnes réunies dans le Colisée était un reflet de la rigidité de la structure de classe de la société romaine. Des loges spéciales aux extrémités nord et sud de l'arène, qui offraient les meilleures vues, étaient réservées à l'empereur. Autour d'elles se trouvait la section accueillant la classe sénatoriale, tandis que le niveau directement au-dessus était occupé par les nobles. Les citoyens riches et respectés de la ville prenaient place au niveau suivant, et les pauvres et les esclaves occupaient le sommet des gradins.
